"News" Called Communist Conspiracy Center

ROCKWELL INSTIGATES NAZIS HERE

This week the Canadian Jewish News received letters of abuse and threat from the distributors of hate literature. The letters, advising us that no one would stop the flood of hate literature and that "six hundred similar letters are being mailed" at this moment, was addressed care of "Communist Conspiracy Headquarters," the new Nazi name for this newspaper. The Toronto post office, which intercepted this obscene mail, is investigating the source.

This newspaper turned over the material to the post office, which recently has begun to do an excellent job in cracking down the lunatic hatemongers.

However, while the government is determined to take steps against these hatemongers in the spirit of the Klein-Walker Bill, it appears that the recent Rockwell broadcast has encouraged some hidden Nazis to emerge into the open. It is rumored also that Lincoln Rockwell, the leader of the American Nazi party, lately has visited Canada and has held secret meetings with Canadian Nazis.

In Toronto last week, the self-proclaimed Nazi troublemaker, David Stanley of Scarborough, dared appear at a meeting Friday night when Rabbi Abraham A. Feinberg was the speaker. He insulted both the Rabbi and the Jewish people at the public meeting.

Now it is universally agreed that the CBC-broadcast of Rockwell's poison has given strength to the lunatic fringe who consider themselves at present newsworthy and respectable.

In Gooderham, Ontario, a certain John Ross Taylor admitted he is a Nazi and anti-semite, and that he and David Stanley are mailing hate literature.

On the other hand, the intervention in Parliament by Opposition Leader John G. Diefenbaker and MP Milton L. Klein has induced the CBC to re-examine its broadcasts and showing of documentaries.

Canadian Jewry

Crisis In Leadership

Last Saturday morning some rabbis (from the pulpit) criticized the Canadian Jewish Congress for failing to mobilize public opinion and influence government action against the appearance of Lincoln Rockwell on a CBC program.

In my opinion, some of the criticism is valid; but other objections are irrelevant. Moreover, the accusations in general against the Canadian Jewish Congress are exaggerated.

First, the policy of the Canadian Jewish Congress in such a situation is guided by the Joint Public Relations Committee of Congress and B'nai B'rith. And it was the leadership of that committee, lay and professional, which went on record against intervention prior to the showing of the Rockwell film. It seems that the same fundamental error — of applying the right of free speech to the letter that guided the Joint Public Relations Committee to hesitate when the Klein-Walker Anti-Hate Bill first was discussed — also influenced its decision last week, to wait and hear what Rockwell had to say. Therefore one can understand the anger of a prominent Toronto Orthodox rabbi who, from the pulpit last Saturday, mentioned this faux pas, stressing the fact that the leader of this committee instructed B'nai B'rith not to demonstrate against the presentation of the Nazi propaganda film.

Several months ago, a similar outburst of popular anger was caused by a statement of the professional public relations man of this committee when he told the Toronto Telegram that the community was opposed to the Klein-Walker Bill, which, of course was incorrect.

Leaders of a community organization, or those who act as such, should be on guard constantly against any utterance or decision that may involve those whom they claim to represent.

In free countries, such as the United States and Canada, there are no communities such as existed in Eastern Europe. No Jew is coerced into belonging to an organization. Officials serving Jewish organizations are appointed or elected by groups of volunteers who try to fill, to the best of their abilities, a vacuum; they endeavour to create the semblance of a Jewish community. Once the masses of Jews decide that these organizations do not represent them, the entire structure of the community is in jeopardy.

Among the organizations of Jews in the free world, the Canadian Jewish Congress occupies a place of honour and distinction. It has succeeded in rallying a great number of groups and organizations. It has written many a glorious chapter in the history of North American Jewry, and of world Jewry in general.

Its weakness, however, stems from the fact that some of those professionally involved in its functioning, keep its deliberations a secret, meet in camera, in contrast, for example, to the most successful Jewish public body, the Board of Deputies of British Jewry, where meetings are open and reported in the press.

Had the Canadian Jewish Congress discussed openly its position vis-à-vis the anti-hate bill or the Rockwell incident, I am sure results would have been different and leaders of Congress would not have been criticized from pulpits for allegedly misrepresenting the Jewish view.

Generally, in contrast, for example, to B'nai B'rith in the United States and the British Board of Deputies, the Public Relations Committee here seems to be run like a private club which has no responsibility towards public opinion. I believe that the thousands of Jews who read this newspaper and are dedicated to Jewish continuity, to militant Judaism, really want Congress to exist and to develop into a true and genuine representation of Canadian Jewry.

But recent events — even the incident provoked when Congress leadership, in closed session, invalidated a resolution passed in a public session to the effect that steps be taken to obtain government subsidies for Jewish day schools — show that the lay leadership of Congress leaves too much to the appointees, professional and semi-professional.

The Rabbis tell us: when sufferance befalls one, he should investigate his deeds. Soul-searching, examination of conscience, investigation of actions also should be demanded from a public body. I wish there were a sort of royal commission that would truly probe into the reasons of the recent errors of the Joint Public Relations Committee.

Again, to those who bombard this newspaper with letters and telephone calls directed against the Canadian Jewish Congress, and to those of the various organizations who protested against Congress last week, I state: one ought to be very careful, very cautious, in this criticism.

I, for one, cannot join in the attacks against Congress. What is necessary is a complete re-organization of the Jewish community-apparatus within the framework of Congress, so that the people feel they are the masters of the house they built.

LYNDON B. JOHNSON

The election of Lyndon B. Johnson to the presidency of the United States is a proof of political maturity of the people of the United States, and of their immunity against demagoguery. One should not forget that Johnson is not President in an era of prosperity only, but also in a period of American history when the enemies of democracy in the Communist world and in Fascist circles have done their utmost to antagonize the United States, to hurt its pride, yes, to wage war upon it in Vietnam and to provoke it's people in Cuba.

Also, on the home front, were the American people not mature, they could have fallen for propaganda which sets White against Negro, labor against business, community against community.

Nothwithstanding all this, however, the Americans, are sober, realistic, humane and understanding; They are determined to end discrimination, to kill bigotry, to eradicate prejudice, to make it truly a world of peace.

It seems to us that even Goldwater is happy because Johnson is president. In his heart he knows that those who voted for Johnson were right and he, Goldwater, could not have trusted his own supporters.

Certainly the free world has gained leadership, and is imbued by new confidence in America the Free.

ISRAELI POLICE COMPLETE CASE

SUPER-SOL AFFAIR READY FOR COURT

By S. STECKOLL
(Israeli Correspondent)

JERUSALEM — Police have concluded their case against four managers of the Canadian supermarket chain in Israel, Super-Sol, after a dramatic all-night session.

This followed the completion of the audit called for by major shareholders of the company, led by Charles Bronfman of Montreal, following revelations of irregularities.

Police Superintendent Arye Naor, in charge of the investigation of the largest swindle in Israel, told The Canadian Jewish News that the breakthrough was sudden and unexpectedly quick.

"On going over the new audit, the pieces simply fell into place," he told me.

He revealed that the amount missing from the funds of Super-Sol is greater than believed to be at first. It reaches four-and-a-half million Israeli pounds ($1,500,000.00, U.S.).

A hundred individuals were questioned during the widespread investigation. Some sixty witnesses will be called at the trial of the four men charged with arson, forgery, keeping false books and taking money under false pretenses.

"The money divides into many sections," Naor told me immediately after he handed the bulky file to the office of the State Prosecutor who will prepare the case against the men, a case which is expected to be of marathon proportion.

The accused are: Abraham Feinberg; Moshe Hyman; Herbert Hordes; and Daniel Gelmond.

"Everything connected with the Super-Sol affair is either in threes, a first or the biggest," a police officer, closely attached to the widespread investigations into the affairs of this Canadian company in Israel, stated.

The investment by Canadians in the Super-Sol supermarket chain is the largest of any Canadian group in this country and the fraud, now under painstaking investigation by the fraud squad of the police under Superintendent Arye Naor, includes a figure greater than any swindle ever investigated by Israeli police.

Together with a special team of auditors appointed by the Canadian board of directors, police have checked into irregularities in the books of the company which indicate that four-and-a-half million Israeli pounds, an equivalent of a million-and-a-half U. S. dollars, are missing.

While it is known that books were forged (indeed, the former manager of the supermarket chain, Abe Feinberg, confessed to this as well as to the arson of the company's offices in an attempt to destroy the books), what has become of this considerable sum has not as yet been revealed.

I. Nash, spokesman for the Israeli police, told me it already has been established that there was fraud.

Because of the complexity of the case, the police have split the dossier of Super-Sol into three sections.

The charge of arson was the first to be submitted to the prosecutor's office for action.

The second, and major, file is that of the missing millions. While members of the fraud squad checked truckloads of documents, they had to rely upon the assistance of auditors.

"Now," I was told, "thank God it makes sense — after explanations by trained auditors appointed in Canada who have checked the books and completed their survey".

The third aspect of the Affair which is the biggest financial scandal in Israel (not without a spate of fraud cases) was the tampering with important records showing government subsidies supposedly allocated for foodstuffs but never purchased — the merchandise appearing on paper only.

Removed from his post as manager of Super-Sol after it was clear that irregularities (to use a mild word had occurred, Abe Feinberg, a Detroiter and Hebrew University graduate, joked with a friend. "They even suspect me of having burned down the Super-Sol offices, but I have an ironclad alibi".

"From reading detective books, an alibi which is too good is not good for the suspect," his friend replied. Both laughed.

Within hours Feinberg was arrested, and after two days he made a complete confession — not only to the arson but also with having "doctored" the books to show that the state of the company was healthier than it actually was; and to present a bigger inventory.

But why had Feinberg steadfastedly and often denied that his motives were meant to cover up for others, or that even one cent had been taken from the company?

He contended that his reasons for the forgeries (over a considerable period) had been to create the impression to the owners in Canada that the Supermarkets were prospering while, in fact, they ran at a considerable loss, as even today.

It was Feinberg who, six years ago, established the supermarket chain in Israel after having persuaded Canadians to invest in the project and induce others to join the company. At the age of 27, as manager, Feinberg was well on the road to glittering success in the economic life of Israel.

● Four of the men intimately connected with the Supermarket in Israel were arrested and released on bail amounting to fantastic sums.

● Feiberg's bail was set at a high of $120,000.00; bail for the company's bookkeeper, Moshe Hyman, was set at $35,000.00.

● Another Detroiter, Herbert Hordes, was released from detention after the court had set surety at $100,000.00.

● Putting together the pieces in the jigsaw puzzle of shenanigans and double dealings, on a scale without parallel in the country, investigators already have turned up a long list of irregular deals by the managers of Super-Sol, which led to personal enrichment at the expense of the company.

● According to the police, a direct line leads to Canada. Also, according to the police records, some "unorthodox" business deals involve at least one major, Canadian shareholder.

● It was a three-pronged manoeuver.

● Without the knowledge or consent of the shareholders in faraway Canada, the managers borrowed large sums from Super-Sol. These loans were accrued largely before Israeli currency was devaluated in February, 1962 — and paid back afterwards As these loans, approved by the borrowers themselves, were not linked to the dollar rate (which was then the practise in this kind of business in Israel), the amounts returned were, in effect, less than those taken, as Israeli currency was devaluated by a massive 67%.

● At one stage, the amount of outstanding "loans" to the managers topped a million American dollars. Super-Sol, at this point, was in such financial straits that it could not pay even its electricity bill.

● With these funds borrowed from Super-Sol, 'in some cases the managers bought out other companies, food producers and suppliers — which they subsequently sold to Super-Sol at inflated prices, registering tremendous profits.

● For $48,000.00, sixty percent of the shares of the Man company were purchased. At this time the book value of Man was one-third this figure.

● This holding is Man, a company processing sardines, that was sold to Super-Sol for over $100,000.00.

● At no stage and in no way was it stated at the time that those who sold their holding to Super-Sol also were, in fact, managers of this company.

● The third prong, or third manner, in siphoning off largesse came to light after police had investigated the affair of the Tomaz company. Fantastic sums were paid to Tomaz, suppliers of chickens, as "advance" payments for future deliveries of fowl.

● After a year, the money was returned to Super-Sol, as the product was not delivered. This, as a matter of fact, made the deal a loan for a year without interest.

And the head of Tomaz is none other than a manager of Super-Sol itself, Herbert Hordes who, also, is among those charged by the police with forging stock records of Super-Sol for more than $300,000.00.

● At one stage, an offer was made to sell the Tomaz company to Super-Sol for a cool $270,000.00. This was at a time when Tomaz was carrying a trading loss of $150,000.00.

● All losses to the supermarket chain from these dealings are over and above the estimated figure of a million-and-a-half, which is the discrepancy between Feinberg's balance sheet and the actual stock.

● One thing is clear, however: for several years the books were "doctored" in order to give the impression that Super-Sol was prospering — to such an extent that the company paid income tax on "invisible" and non-existant income, reaching the exorbitant amount of a million Israeli pounds ($350,000.00).

From Montreal, Charles Bronfman, who allegedly holds fourteen percent in Super-Sol, has opened negotiations with the Israeli Commissioner of Income Tax to have sum refunded.

This, also, will take time since the taxation authorities are unprepared to make a new reckoning before the completion of the present audit of the Super-Sol books, an audit which includes the past six years of Super-Sol operation.

JUSTICE LIEFF APPEALS TO TORONTONIANS FOR FULL, INTEGRAL JEWISH EDUCATION

In an impassioned address calling upon Toronto Jews to devote their energies to the primary task of our generation — Jewish education — Justice Abraham H. Lieff of the Supreme Court of Ontario inspired an audience of approximately one thousand persons, including this city's intellectual elite, its leaders and teachers.

The occasion was the fifteenth anniversary of Toronto's Bureau of Education and a tribute to its executive director, Dr. Joseph Diamond.

The event took place at the Associated Hebrew School on Sunday afternoon.

While stressing the ideal of unity in a community, Mr. Justice Lieff cautioned all those interested in education to fight for an integral Jewish school system and against influence of "illiterate" would-be leaders in Jewish education.

The speakers at the impressive celebration included: — Meyer W. Gasner, who greeted the assembly on behalf of Congress and Welfare Fund; David Newman, president of the Toronto Jewish Teachers Seminars who greeted the guests on behalf of the Seminary; Kalmen Berger, who brought greetings from the Kultur Gezelshaft; E. Munk, who as president of Toronto Teachers Alliance, brought greetings; Jack Pearlstein, president of the Bureau and chairman of the event; Controller Herbert Orliffe who introduced the guest speaker; Dr. Diamond, honoree and executive director of the Bureau; Joseph Levine, chairman of the Board of Affiliated Hebrew Day Schools, who greeted the guests in the name of all the schools.

Seek Zionist Entente

Ottawa (CJN). — Lawrence Freiman, the newly elected president of the Zionist Organisation of Canada, has begun negotiations with the leaders of the Labor Zionist Movement and Mizrachi-Hapoel Hamizrachi in order to end the new conflict in Canadian Zionism. At the last convention, held in Montreal last week, the Religious Zionists and the Labor Zionist (including all factions) walked out. The Religious Zionists, as Rabbi Zemach Zambrowsky stated, would not participate in the Zionist Organization so long as it remained a one-party institution. Mr. Hyman Bessin of Ottawa, who made the statement on behalf of the parties quitting the convention, declared that these groups reserve for themselves the right to co-operate within or without the ZOC but will insist on a complete reorganization of the movement to give all factions proper representation.

Mr. Ben C. Milner of Montreal, a leader of the Zionist Revisionists, who chose to remain, declared to The Canadian Jewish News that his group has the fullest confidence in the new leadership and the administration should be given a chance to iron out the problems.

John R. Devor of Toronto was elected first vice president of the Zionist Organisation of Canada; Samuel Sokoloff of Montreal became treasurer; Julius Hayman of Toronto, secretary.

MEMORIAL UNVEILED IN ITALY

ROME (JCNS) — The deportation of many of Italy's Jews by the Nazis during the war was commemorated at a special ceremony at the Portico d'Ottavia, in the heart of the ancient Roman Jewish quarter on Sunday.

A memorial was unveiled at the spot where German lorries stopped in October 1943, to take on 2,091 Jews, who were deported. Only 101 returned. Altogether, the Germans deported 8,000 Italian Jews.

A further 2,000 Jews fought with the Italian partisans. This was pointed out by many of the speakers at the ceremony, which was organized by the national committee formed to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the beginning of the Resistance movement in Italy.

Senator Ferruccio Parri, a former Italian Prime Minister; Signor Paolo Taviani, the Minister of the Interior; Signor Amerigo Petrucci, the Mayor of Rome; Rabbi Elio Toaff, the Chief Rabbi of Rome; Judges Sergio Piperno, the president of the Union of Italian Jewish Communities; Professor Fausto Pitigliani, the president of the Rome Jewish community; and many other leading Jews and non-Jews were present.

On behalf of President Segni of Italy, who is ill, Signor Taviani presented Judge Piperno with the Civil Valour medal in gold "in honour of the dignity and stoicism with which the Jews of Italy suffered persecution, fought in the Resistance movement and accomplished the renaissance of the surviving Jewish communities after the war".

To Address Mammoth Rally Of Histadrut

Mr. Abraham Shurem, National Executive Director of the Israel Histadrut Campaign of Canada, will be the guest of the 21st Annual Conference of the Toronto Histadrut Campaign.

Mr. Shurem came to Canada over 40 years ago and has been active in Jewish affairs during all this time. He has held many important positions in the Labour Movement, having been Secretary-Treasurer of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in Montreal. A leader of the Labour Zionist Movement of Canada and the Histadrut Campaign, he has travelled the length and breadth of the country on behalf of Labour Israel. A number of years ago, Mr. Shurem was asked to go to Latin America on behalf of Histadrut and was very successful in campaigning there.

Mr. Shurem visited Israel this past summer, where he met with the leaders of the Histadrut to discuss the many projects to be undertaken by the Canadian campaign.

The Conference, to be held Sunday, November 15th, 9.00 A.M., at the Labor Zionist Centre, 12 Viewmount Ave., will hear reports of the past year's activities and formulate plans for the 1965 campaign.

Fraternal organizations, societies, Landsmanshaften and Trade Unions have already sent in the names of over 200 delegates who will be attending.

B'nai B'rith Groups Unite For Outstanding Event On Behalf Of Bonds

North York Lodge B'nai B'rith will join with sister North York Chapter and Wilson Heights and Commonwealth Lodges in an outstanding "Israeli Evening" at Adath Isreal Synagogue on Sunday, November 15th, as the climax event of their Israel Bond Campaigns for 1964. Sonnee Cohen, President of North York Lodge, who will serve as Chairman of the Evening, has announced programme details for the event which promises to be a most memorable occasion for the members of all the sponsoring groups.

Head-line artist will be Jan Bart, sensational humorist and lyric tenor who was recently awarded the highly-coveted "America-Israel Friendship Award" at a special presentation ceremony in Carnegie Hall, New York City, and who was also honoured by his selection to perform at a "Command Performance" at the White House. Two talented members of the participating lodges — Paul Heiman and Ed Waldes, will also be featured on the program in a medley of Israeli instrumental favorites.

This year Toronto B'nai B'rith Lodges and Chapters have broken all previous records of Israel Bond sales within their units, and are now well within reach of their target of "1800 B'nai B'rith Bond Buyers in '64". Individual and combined events sponsored by numerous lodges and chapters have been instrumental in encouraging the participation of many "first-time" Israel Bond purchasers, and many more such events have been scheduled for the coming months before the close of the campaign.

On Sunday, October 25th, 1964, Chi Chapter of the Alpha Phi Pi Fraternity of Hamilton undertook and carried out the placing and exchanging of Jewish National Fund Blue Boxes in the city of Hamilton.

The participating Fraternity Members were assisted by community workers and members of the Hamilton Jewish National Fund Council, under the supervision of Mr. Abe Chertkoff, Chairman for Blue Box Collections.

The enthusiasm engendered by the activity resulted in the placing of more than 550 J.N.F. Blue Boxes in the homes of Hamilton and suburbs, and the exchange of many others for the clearance of funds.

This interest, on behalf of the Jewish National Fund, was brought about through the efforts of Morley Stock, Charities Chairman, and was sponsored by Howard Goobler, Chancellor of the Chapter, with the assistance of David Cohen, Pledge Master. "Where there is a will, there is a way," and the members of Chi Chapter of Alpha Phi Pi Fraternity have certainly proven what youth can do for Israel and community affairs.

PERONISTA STATEMENT

ARGENTINE ANTISEMITISM

Whatever may be said of General Peron's views and policies, the fact must be recognised that his regime was never antisemitic. The present outspoken condemnation of antisemitism by leading Peronistas must, therefore, be taken seriously. The complaint that it endangers national unity is meant sincerely, for the Peron regime always concentrated on the need to build a separate Argentine nation out of the various ethnic strands which make up this largely immigrant country.

This Peronist "demarche" is a reminder that Jewish welfare cannot be automatically equated with any particular political trend.

It must, in fairness, be added that the present Government of Argentina has also been forthright in its denunciation of antisemitism, although there has been some validity in the complaint that their actions to clamp down on antisemitic violence has, in the past, been less than vigorous.

In fact, in Argentina, as the world over, extremes of either Right or Left — Tacuara or Communists — undermine the Jews' position one way or another.

The outspoken condemnation of antisemitism by Peronist politicians, intellectuals and trade unionists following on similar statements from the country's present leadership, confirm that antisemitism, though virulent, is confined to a fringe of Argentine political life and can be defeated.

GLORIOUS INSTITUTION

JEWISH NATIONAL FUND

In 1948, when the new state of Israel was established, only one-fifth of its territory was fit for cultivation; the rest was either natural or man-made waste land.

In these words, the author of an important work on the problem of land and soil in Israel describes the situation at the time when the Jewish National Fund (Keren Kayemeth Leisrael) was asked by the government of the new state to multiply its efforts in order to prepare more arable land for the newcomers.

This task was accepted by J.N.F. leadership with enthusiasm. Experience from pre-state years — when the Jewish National Fund had been redeeming land from strange hands and turning it over to the World Zionist Organization as property of the Jewish people — served the present leaders in the fulfillment of their new duty. For without a Jewish National Fund, the Land of Israel (except for a few settlements) would have remained rock and stone. In fact, it was the Jewish National Fund that, for decades, had made the dream of the return to the Jewish land possible — by giving land to landless people.

Now that the Land of Israel has become sovereign, the Jewish National Fund finally could expand. There was no further need to actually purchase the soil at the homeland; it was necessary but to prepare it for colonization. The new task was land reclamation. A unified land policy was established, a Land Authority appointed and the J.N.F. was exclusively charged with land development.

The little Blue-White Box and outright gifts from Jews the world over helped the J.N.F. literally to push back the desert, hold sand dunes; close gullies; terrace hill slopes and actually, for the second time, redeem the land. Bare hills were covered with trees. Malaria areas were rehabilitated.

In this vast enterprise and historical effort, Canadian Jewry has played an important part through its association with the Jewish National Fund. Thus it is fitting that the Negev dinner, which will be held in Toronto on December 2nd, again should remind all Jews that the work by the J.N.F. continue.

PARTY ALIGNMENTS

ESHKOL — BEN GURION CONFLICT

The differences of opinion between the Israeli Prime Minister, Levi Eshkol and Ben-Gurion, his predecessor, have again flared up into the open. The immediate bone of contention is the proposed change in relationship between Mapai (the Israeli Labour Party) and Ahdut Avoda, the small party which stands immediately to Mapai's left.

Though the two Mapai leaders share common aims the dispute reflects their differences of approach and personality. Mr. Ben-Gurion's approach is now an "all or nothing" one: either a complete merge between Mapai and Ahdut Avoda — largely on the former's terms—or nothing. Mr. Eshkol's approach is pragmatic. He recognises that the leaders of the splinter group which broke away from Mapai just over twenty years ago are not prepared to give up their identity and merge completely with the larger party at this stage on any terms which the latter could conceivably concede. Yet some closer working relationship between the two parties is essential to the stability of Government and Histadrut.

The compromise proposed by the Israeli Premier would, he hopes, make the coalition more solid and prevent the Histadrut becoming the prey to party intrigues. Out of such a working arrangement, it seems reasonable to suppose, closer and more organic unity might grow as long-standing suspicions and personal vendettas are overcome.

Mr. Ben-Gurion fears that an electoral arrangement between Mapai and Ahdut Avoda would only perpetuate the present electoral system based on proportional representation. This, he complains, deprives the country of stable parliamentary majorities and makes government dependent on coalition, giving undue scope for mischief and blackmail to the smaller parties. But Mr. Eshkol recognises the fact that at present a majority of parties —and of electors—is opposed to adopting the constituency member system, precisely because it would give Mapai virtually unrestricted power in the country. If all Israelis could agree on a change of system, all would be well and good. But since they cannot, the Israeli Premier prefers his present exercise in the art of the possible.

It has been objected that an electoral arrangement on the Left would provoke one on the Right, between Herut and the Liberals. But so much the better if it did. Israel has suffered equally from the lack of stable parliamentary majorities and of an opposition strong enough to provide a possible alternative government

Greater political stability in Israel would be a boon to the Diaspora, too, and not only because all Jews have Israel's well-being at heart. It would also reduce the scope for involving Jewish groups outside Israel in the State's internal politics by minorities anxious to secure tactical advantage. Israel's friends abroad would be relieved to be extricated from involvement in her domestic political life.

NAZI CRIMINALS' TRIALS

The Statute of Limitation, if applied by the West German government, will in effect bring to an end the Nazi trials in May 1965. This means that if the decree is allowed to stand unchallenged and unchanged, the thousands of Nazi murderers and war criminals who had been awaiting the long arm of justice to catch up with them will be allowed to go free instead. More, they thus will be encouraged to intensify their activities, slowly find their way back into positions of responsibility in Germany, as many have done already.

These are the former Nazis who were responsible for what happened in Auschwitz, Treblinka, Maidanek, Belszets and many other concentration camps and ghettoes.

Many of these are free in Germany and active in neo-Nazi organizations, and spread their poison-literature not only in Germany but throughout the world. On the 20th of April of this year, the neo-Nazis celebrated Hitler's birthday by demolishing 60 monuments in the Jewish cemetery in Cologne.

The Nazi criminals, including Mengeles, Borman and thousands of others who are in hiding with the help of their friends or who obtained residence rights in various countries under assumed names, will be free to come out into the open to enjoy life — and on one will have the right to demand that they be brought to justice. This would let loose upon the world a host of the most dangerous sadists; it would threaten Jewish life everywhere, because enemies of the Jewish people would learn that to murder Jews is not a punishable crime, and it would proclaim to the world that the greatest muderers in history can escape punishment.

It is conceivable for us to accept the idea that next May 8th the Nazi murderers will crawl out of their hiding places and obtain full citizenship rights? The whole civilized world should protest against this act, because it would mean desecrating the memory of six million Jews and millions of other nationals. It is not only a question of revenge, for there is no punishment devised by man fit for criminals such as the former Nazis. They should be excluded from human society because of their heinous crimes. They have placed themselves outside the law.

We must not allow ourselves to forget. We must not allow the world to still its conscience. Our people lost far, far too much, that we should dare to forget even for one minute.

When a man perpetrates a murder on a child, people are horrified and we can understand it. Where was the indignation of the world when a million-and-a-half innocent children were thrown into the gas chambers in the concentration camps where they stood naked and terrified, waiting their turn for death? Where is the indignation of humanity now, when we face the possibility that these same executioners of children next year will become free citizens, that we shall have to breathe the same air as they?

The impression has been created among many Germans and non-Germans that the Nazis have not murdered millions of Jews, that the Jews themselves have fabricated these figures. If the statute of limitation should become a reality, the Germans will claim that only a few hundred charges were brought against Nazi criminals; and then conclude that the Jews have exaggerated their losses or that they murdered themselves.

The special department for war criminals in West Germany has a list of approximately eighty-thousand suspects, among them thirty-seven thousand of the most vicious criminals. Unfortunately, the German courts had been extremely mild in their attitude towards these Nazis. Out of thirteen thousand cases investigated by the courts, only a small number of criminals were prosecuted, and most of them were given ordinary terms of prison, and after a short while, completely freed.

Not until 1958, when the special department for war crimes was created, did West Germany seriously begin to be concerned about the Nazi criminals. Even so, the law does not punish them as they deserve to be. If a criminal responsible for the extermination of forty-thousand Jews gets only four years of prison, it is no punishment, for it means only one hour of prison for every murdered Jew. Wolff, who was proven during his trial in West Germany last month to have been responsible for sending 300,000 Warsaw Jews to their death, received a sentence of fifteen years. This is not justice as we understand that word today.

So long as the statute of limitation is not in force, the possibility of bringing these murderers to justice exists. If it is removed, nothing more will be done. It is our sacred duty to see to it that the law for trying and punishing war criminals remains in effect until every last Nazi has been meted out the punishment he deserves by the humanity against whom he committed these atrocities.

We must not make peace with an idea which is contrary to all tenets of human morality, of human justice. It is our duty to start a public campaign to invalidate the expiry of the law for war crimes, so that every Nazi criminal can be brought to justice whenever he is apprehended. We must call attention again to the brutal crimes perpetrated by the Nazi murderers upon the Jewish people and other nations and demand that all those to whom justice is sacred should appeal to the German government and the German people that the statute of limitation should not apply to the Nazi criminals and beasts. If these thousands of sub-human criminals are permitted to return to West Germany, we can be sure that it will not be long before we will see the nazification and revival of facism in that country.

It is our sacred duty towards the innocent victims of our people to make maximum efforts to reach this goal. We must appeal to our Canadian government to use its influence in Germany so that the new law should not be applicable to the German war criminals.

Canada, which fought the Nazis during the last war and lost many thousands of its young men and women, must be interested as well in seeing to it that these trials, which have far-reaching historical and human implications, be continued until their conclusion. Canada, which has shown itself on more than one occasion to be concerned with human rights and human dignity in the world councils, could play here again a dominant role in pronouncing for the world that all Nazi war criminals must be brought to justice.

We owe a debt to those who perished in the holocaust — to help punish their murderers. Let us fulfill our duty with devotion and respect. It is the very least we can do. Our descendants, as well as future historians, never will forgive us if we fail in our duty to do everything possible to mete out punishment for the bloodshed of the innocent.

Protests have come from Jewish communities in Poland, Austria, France, Bulgaria, Israel, the U.S.A and other countries. A stream of protest must come from every Jewish organization; our protest must be mighty — "No expiry of the law to bring to justice the greatest criminals the world has ever seen!"

Now that so many nations of the world are opposed to the expiry of the law for war crimes in West Germany, the organized Jewish community in Canada, many of whom come from East European countries and some of whom lived through the Nazi hell, must also express their sharpest protest.

JOHN R. DEVOR

For John R. Devor, who, at the age of 49, has become first vice president of the Zionist Organisation of Canada, this is the crowning achievement in a life dedicated to the movement for the national Jewish renascence.

Practically all his life, St. Catharines-born John has been a salesman for Zionism. He became interested in Young Judea a year before bar mitzvah. His "rebbi" in Zionism was Manny Hoffman of Kitchener, who established St. Catharine's Young Judea Chapter.

A son of an immigrant family (Devor's father came from Latvia, his mother Kate emigrated from England), John attended Cheder where he obtained a sound Hebrew education.

His mother, Kate Devor, now a leader of Mizrachi Women, is a life-long Zionist.

The Devor home, during John's childhood, never was prosperous. But despite that, there always was talk of the Jewish dream, of an Israel reborn.

Thus, when the Devors moved to Toronto in 1933, after John had graduated from high school and had become a salesman, he began selling Zionism and Young Judea wherever his business took him. He is one of the few Zionists who succeeded in selling Zionism to his own children, all of whom were taught Hebrew and sent to Jewish schools.

Mr. and Mrs. Devor (she is the former Mildred Rittersporn, a past president of Hadassah and leader in women's Jewish activities) always have had an interest in Jewish education and supported the Jewish day schools.

Their oldest son is a student at the Hebrew University. The two younger children, boy and girl, attend Toronto's Hebrew Community High School.

At this moment, John R. Devor is extending all his energies to the success of the forthcoming Negev dinner which promises to be Toronto's Jewish event of the year.

While working hard for the success of the Morris Kaufman Dinner, Mr. Devor found time to attend the Zionist convention in Montreal, was elected first vice president, delivered an important address and fought for what he considers his most important task in the movement — promoting Aliyah. Without Aliyah, John maintains, we shall be split into two Jewish nations.

Of course, Aliyah requires preparation of the soil for the newcomer. And here lies the crux of John's interest in the Jewish National Fund, where he now serves as chairman of the Negev dinner.

Between one meeting and another, Devor manages to attend affairs as vice president of the Toronto Bureau of Jewish Education, functions as vice president of the Associated Hebrew Schools, be seen at action meetings for the United Jewish Appeal, and work for Israel Bonds and the United Jewish Welfare Fund.

No matter how late the hour, in the typical Zionist tradition John Devor is ready at a moment's notice for a new meeting, a new task — especially when it effects Israel or Jewish edu-

SERMON FOR THE WEEK

FOR THEY ARE OUR LIFE

It has been observed that the Jewish people tends to make capital out of its dead. If sufferance has been the badge of our tribe, then we are often inclined to wear it a little ostentatiously. Other peoples in the world have also suffered. The history of the human race unfolds a tale in which few groups have escaped scot free from the heartache and the thousand natural shocks that flesh is heir to. And from a strictly theological point of view, a million dead and one dead should present the same problem. You cannot multiply pain. Once you have reached the limit that the individual can endure, you have the whole problem.

There are other areas in Jewish life where death has been capitalised upon. The customs relating to death once formed part of a whole. Mourners were once the minority in Jewish communal worship. That the Angel of Death is today the best sexton is evident. It is not good when the abnormal becomes the norm in congregational worship.

Of course we are an old people and, with age, sad memories tend to increase. We have also, it is true, endured great suffering, ourselves from time to time that the present and the future have a claim on our interests as well as the past, and that the living are as much, if not more, important than the dead. A synagogue which is crammed to capacity for Memorial Services and empty for its Annual Membership Meeting has its sense of spiritual values in perilous imbalance.

One suspects that a prime cause is the current Jewish penchant for nostalgia. A sentimental attachment to the past has always been a characteristic of Jewish life on good and bad levels. The Children of Israel, wandering in the desert, hankered longingly after the delicatessen of Egypt. "Renew our days as of old", which begins as an anguished cry from Jeremiah mourning over the destruction of Jerusalem, is caught up at a crucial point in the Jewish liturgy, where it becomes more than a prayer to God to rebuild His House and gather in His exiles. It becomes a canvas on which each generation projects its own personal yearnings for the good old days.

But never has there been an age when this feeling has been stronger. To talk to many Jews today about their involvement in Judaism is to gain the impression that it is a vicarious involvement. If grandfather founded a synagogue or if grandma is clearly remembered as having organised a beautiful Seder, then nostalgia permits a personal disinvolvement. As long as I have the appropriate emotional responses to a certain kind of Jewish life, so the argument seems to run, my own involvement is relatively unimportant.

A new Broadway musical opened recently—"Fiddler on the Roof"—in which the exploits of Sholom Aleichem's Tevye der Milchiger are portrayed. As Tevye and all the families in Anatevka light their Sabbath candles thousands of New York Jewish matrons sob, performance after performance. The question is: for how many of those who cry, is Erev Shabbat a current family reality? It were surely better to be a Jew in the present, however starkly, than simply to be able to emote vicariously about a warm but non-existent past.

● David Susskind, who once found the networks, sponsors and ad agencies responsible for degrading TV standards, says now he thinks the public is to blame. "The real sickness in television," he claims, "is the audience, because I think 'Peyton Place' is too sexy, too tasteless, too much. Yet it's a smash hit."

"Beverly Hillbillies," Susskind goes on, "doesn't happen to be my can of comedic fruit, but it's a smash hit. Now the good things—East Side, West Side, bit the dust. The network invested $2 million. We were alway unsponsored....

"This season, I would guess that my favorite show, Slattery's People, is the best show for me. I would predict its demise. It's too good. It says something."

He observed that the reason for this is:

"We in television inherited a word we never made. You made it with your books, your rotten newspapers and your terrible movies and your ghastly billboards and your cheap magazines and your inept clergy and your faulty educational system. We inherited this illiterate public and we're trying to take it along."

● Isaac Stern was elected president of the American-Israel Cultural Foundation. He succeeds Samuel Rubin, who was president for eight-and-a-half years.

The foundation is an American organization devoted to aiding cultural activities in Israel and cultural exchanges between the two countries. It grants scholarships annually to Israelis for study in their own country and abroad.

● With a theater of her own, Jerusalem will be able to take her rightful place in the nation's cultural life. Thus Mayor Mordechai Ish-Shalom declared, presiding at the cornerstone-laying ceremony of the Miles Sherover Jerusalem Theater in the Talbieh quarter.

In the audience were many distinguished members of the theatrical profession, the sciences and arts. Speakers included: the Minister of Education, Mr. Zalman Aranne; Shimon Finkel of Habimah; and Mr. Sherover, whose $500,000 contribution made the construction of the theater possible.

● Danny Kaye is a terrific cook. In fact, a better cook than in some better restaurants.

● In Israel Miriam Makeba is considered a symbol of what freedom can do for the downtrodden. She has gained poise and assurance; her gifts have been deepened by contact with artists of stature in similar fields. She now moves among men and women who are unshackled, who do not have to take refuge in dreams, whose grinding poverty does not limit them to the penny-whistle, who do not have to slink through the escape-alleys between the white men's luxuriant gardens in order to enjoy a brief hour of relaxation with friends. And she has not forgotten her people's tribulations and has spoken up for them.

In the Little Club last week Miss Louise mentioned that the play will open first in Toronto. "You're right, I won't," replied Miss Louise, with all the determination of a seasoned stage star. "Because if you catch the flu, I'll keep my distance so that I won't catch it; I don't want to have to miss a performance."

Gadna Tour Successful

GADNA, the 85-piece Israel National Youth Symphony, now making the rounds of the United States with overwhelming success, will perform in Massey Hall on Sunday, November 15th, 8:30 p.m., under the auspices of the Canada Israel Cultural Foudation. The orchestra will appear here under the patronage of Her Excellency Mrs. Golda Meir, Foreign Minister of Israel, and His Excellency, Mr. Avraham Harman, Ambassador of Israel to the United States.

International recognition first came to Gadna through performances at the Brussels World's Fair in 1958. The orchestra played several times in the Israeli Pavilion at the Fair. Later the group participated at Kerkrade, Holland, in the World Music Competition for Orchestras, in which 170 orchestras from 20 countries took part. Gadna won first place.

Merry Widow Breaks Records

Franz Lehar's The Merry Widow, which the Music Theater of New York's Lincoln Center is bringing to O'Keefe Center on Tuesday, November 10th, for three weeks, is completing its record-breaking five-week engagement at the New York State Theater, where it piled up the highest grosses ever recorded in Broadway history.

The cast which will participate in the melodically romantic going on at Maxim's and other Paris boites includes, in addition to Miss Patrice Munsel and Mr. Bob Wright, Mischa Auer, Sig Arno, Frank Porretta, Joan Weldon, Joseph Leon, Wood Romoff and Robert Goss.

This presentation of The Merry Widow perhaps is the most opulent revival ever presented of the celebrated Lehar operetta.

Music Of Kurt Weill Nostalgic

The World of Kurt Weill, featuring Martha Schlamme and Will Holt, which will be presented at Eaton Auditorium on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, December 1, 2, 3, has been performed very successfully in New York and London. Abraham Stockman, foremost "Weill" pianist, will accompany the singers.

The World of Kurt Weill, produced here by Vera Norman, is a rich sampling of his melodic outpouring. It includes melodies from the Three — penny Opera, September Song, Jenny Made Her Mind Up, and others. Many favorites which will be heard are Mack the Knife, The Barbara Song, Pirate Jenny, Lost In the Stars, Tango Balade.

Barefoot... Convulsing

One of the gayest, breeziest and most wildly hilarious comedies to hit the American scene in a decade is Barefoot in the Park, now convulsing audiences at the Royal Alexandra Theater. Featuring Myrna Loy, Richard Benjamin, Joan Van Ark, Sandor Szabo, and others, Barefoot.... tells the story of a young married couple's trials and tribulations in setting up housekeeping right after a short honeymoon. Their adjustment to married life and their manner in facing everyday occurrences provide a network of situations which border on the ridiculous.

"Seidman and Son" a Hit

Temple Sinai scores again with the hit play, Seidman and Son. Directed by Sean Mulcahy, the production, about New York's Seventh Avenue garment center, was performed last week to a capacity audience and indications are that it will do so again this weekend. Included in the cast are Al Silver, Donna Miller Linden, Mark Stone and Mel Samuel.

HAUNTING REFRAIN — Martha Schlamme and Will Holt, who will be heard singing the satirical and haunting music of Kurt Weill when The World of Kurt Weill will be presetned at Eaton Auditorium, Tuesday — Thursday, December 1st through 3rd.

MINKLER HONORED BY TOWNSHIP

Dr. F. W. Minkler, Director of Education and Secretary-Treasurer for the Board of Education for the Township of North York, has completed 20 years of service in North York. In honour of his outstanding contribution, the Chairman and Members of the Board of Education have arranged a testimonial dinner and public reception. These celebrations will be held in Northview Heights Collegiate Institute, 550 Finch Avenue West, on the evening of Saturday, November 14th. The testimonial dinner will be held at 7:000 p.m. and the public reception at 9:30 p.m.

The first Public School Inspector to have all of North York Township in his inspectorate, Dr. Minkler was appointed to this position by the Ontario Department of Education in 1944. Having served in this capacity for ten years, he was appointed Director of Education by the newly-formed Township Area Board of Education in 1954.

Dr. Minkler received his public school and high school education in Woodstock, Ontario, and then attended London Normal School. He received his Bachelor of Arts Degree from Queen's University and the degrees of Bachelor of Pedagogy and Doctor of Pedagogy from the University of Toronto.

Dr. Minkler was a member of the Toronto Public School staff from 1924 to 1938. While he was on the Toronto staff, he received a Teaching Research Fellowship at the Ontario College of Education of the University of Toronto. From 1938 to 1954 he was an instructor in the Graduate School of Education of the Ontario College of Education and an Inspector of Public Schools for the Department of Education of Ontario. He held Inspectorships in Essex County, Welland East, Niagara Falls and in York County.

During 1948 and 1949, Dr. Minkler was seconded from his inspectoral duties to permit him to act as Educational Adviser to the Royal Commission Education under Mr. Justice John A. Hope. In 1951 he was a special instructor in his subject, Philosophy of Education, at the Summer School of the University of Alberta, and in 1953 he accepted a similar appointment for the summer at the University of Saskatchewan.

As Director of Education for the Township of North York, Dr. Minkler guided the study of the education, whereby junior high schools were introduced as an integral part of the educational system.

Dr. Minkler is a Director of the Canadian Education Association, a Fellow of the Royal Canadian Geographical Society, a member of Phi Delta Kappa, an international fraternity for men in Education, and holds membership in numerous other educational organizations.

Great changes have taken place in North York since Dr. Minkler's first appointment. In 1944, there were 16 schools and a population of 25,100. Now there are 121 schools, a population of 331,000 and 75,000 pupils attending North York schools. The North York educational system is now the third largest in Canada and the second largest in Ontario. Well konw for its high standard of scholarship and readiness to investigate new methods, educators and exchange teachers from many parts of the world visit North York schools.

3 JEWS IN LABOR GOVERNMENT

LONDON (JCNS)—Three Jews are among those who have received senior positions in Mr. Harold Wilson's administration.

Sir Barnett Stross, who was returned last week as M.P. for Stoke-on-Trent with an increased majority, has been appointed Parliamentary Secretary, Ministry of Health. Mr. John Diamond, M.P. for Gloucester, is the new Chief Secretary at the Treasury, and Sir Andrew Cohen, former Governor of Uganda, is Permanent Secretary to the new Ministry of Overseas Development.

Sir Andrew, who is aged 55, has been director-general of the Department of Technical Co-operation since 1961. From 1957-61 he was Britain's permanent representative on the Trusteeship Council of the United Nations.

He is a direct descendant of Levy Barnet Cohen, founder of the oldest Ashkenazi family in Britain, and is a cousin of Sir Bernard Waley-Cohen.

Craeybeck Victor In Antwerp

ANTWERP (JCNS) — Lode Crayebeck, the Socialist Mayor of Antwerp, who was severely criticized and later apologized for an antisemitic outburst in a café incident in April, was returned in the city's municipal election.

He was the candidate who obtained most votes in his party and it is likely that he will continue in office as mayor.

In Boisfort, a suburb of Brussels, M. Jacques Wiener, a Liberal, was re-elected Mayor. In Uccle, another suburb, Alderman Marcel Sluzny, a Socialist, was also re-elected.

CANADIAN GIRLS AT Y. U.

NEW YORK (CJN) — Eleven Canadian girls are members of the freshman class at Yeshiva University's Stern College for Women, New York City.

HOW MUCH LONGER?

BY RUTHIE

It's a good thing my children aren't around now, so I can express how I really feel. And it's this: almost forever we're on their necks to do something one way, then when they comply, we're unhappy.

* * *

Show me, if you can, one parent of an elementary school student who does not have to nag and nag about doing homework. I'm not implying that any youngster is lax. They all do homework. But, it's the intensity I mean. One sits near the TV set, another has the radio blaring, some, in between studying, want to be in on all the gossip going around.

Don't say they need their own quiet corner. Because, wherever they are, they manage to crawl out like ants.

So you spit your lungs out yelling — if they don't do their assignments right, anything they want, they won't get.

And that's the pattern for a good number of years.

Finally comes grade 13, and you stagger under the sudden change.

Like countless other mothers, I'm going through that phase now. And frankly, I prefer the other.

Because if you're in the house you must remember not to breathe even. God forbid, when you walk and the floor creaks, with or without carpeting.

"Ma," you hear a screech from someplace under the roof, "stop making noise. You want me to flunk?"

So right away they shtrossa (threaten) you — if they flunk it will be your fault.

And TV? Who ever heard of the thing. So far as that's concerned, we could just as well live in the Middle Ages. Who can listen to the news broadcasts? No matter what hour you try, it's always the wrong time. The click of the dial is a signal for a tirade.

Ah, but it's another story when the series of that crummy Peyton Place is on the air. When you protest, the answer invariably is,

"Oh, I'm practically finished. So I'm breaking it up to relax a little."

"So why don't you check your work," I, for one, try to outshout.

"Ma, sh! This is the best part . . . Don't worry so much, I'll pass."

And you throw up your hands in surrender.

* * *

In the morning, when your big thinker finally is out of bed and you're up to your ears in preparing several lunches and coaxing the others up, you get a shrill,

"Ma! I have no blouses. Didn't you iron any?"

You try not to feel exasperated so early in the morning. "What's wrong with the sixty-five hanging in your closet?" you shout up.

"They don't match," or, "Do you want me to look like a drip?"

"You make a last, courageous sputter. "At seventeen, and you still have to rely on me?"

Comes the old classic, "But I have to study every minute. Do you want me to flunk?"

You mutter, "And this too will pass."

* * *

I think back to my schooldays and wonder, "Was I that bad?" Of course, I'd never ask Mama, She'd say, "Worse."

Yet I can't see that I terrorized the whole house. Maybe, as I recall, there were moments when I trusted to luck. But near the deadline I panicked and did a last-minute boning up.

I remember the nights I sweated just before my three-year Latin Regents.

The grammar was bad enough: translation of words, irregular conjunctions, learning the gender of nouns, knowing which prepositions took the dative, accusative or both. But, to top it off, we had to know the contents of Caesar and Cicero — in the original. And doing Cicero was a ball — sentences started off with the main subject, but they always were chopped off by a couple of secondary clauses, and, after a whole page, maybe you come across the main verb.

Oh, boy! Since Latin wasn't my forte, I certainly had fun. But, thanks to my photographic mind, two nights before the exam I settled down in earnest. Did I cram! I memorized Caesar and Cicero from cover to cover (and they were fat books too).

Mama slept through it all, but Papa was mad. One hour he stuck his head into my room and yelled, "Nukh oltz (still)?" Another hour, "Doomkupp (dumbhead), when will it end?" A third time, "Nu, so when will my genius go to bed?" The fourth time, Mama, awakened by the din, yelled at Papa,

"So, gay shoin shluffen (go to sleep already) and leave her alone. You have to get up soon yourself."

* * *

Upon reconsideration the kids have my fullest sympathy. I'll be quiet as a mouse, even if it kills me. Of course, I can predict they'll pass. If I did, anybody could.

KEEP SMILING

CAN'T BE OTHERWISE

Upon arriving in Tel Aviv, a German Jewish immigrant went for a walk with a friend who already lived in the city. The immigrant studied everything around him. But he was particularly puzzled by the Hebrew signs.

He asked: "Why are there prayers over every business establishment?"

* * *

ON THE ALERT

Pinya: Did you hear the latest? One Arab stabbed another Arab to death in Rosh Pinah. The English police arrived immediately and caught him.

Simkha: Whom? The murderer?

Pinya: No, the murdered. The murderer fled.

SURPRISE

Here in America, Mrs. Cohen was in her husband's book store all day long while he was out. But no customer appeared. She kept muttering to herself, "Jewish learning is getting weaker and weaker in this country."

However, just before closing time, a customer appeared.

"Would you please come back tomorrow and buy your books then?" Mrs. Cohen asked.

"Why tomorrow?" queried the astonished customer.

"Because," replied Mrs. Cohen, "tomorrow is my husband's birthday and I want him to have a surprise."

KNOW-HOW

Levine's success in the dry goods business created serious competition for him; Greenberg and Gold opened similar stores on either side of him. However, Levine's resourfulness kept him leading in the field.

As a last resort, Greenberg and Gold put up huge signs announcing price-slashing sales for the following day.

In the morning the two men discovered that Levine had put up a sign over his store: Main Entrance.

BETH SHOLOM YOUNG COUPLES SPONSOR ISRAEL BOND DINNER

Continuing the fine tradition of dedicated support for Israel's historic program of economic development established by members of Beth Sholom Congregation, the Beth Sholom Young Married Couples Club are sponsoring a gala "Dinner and Evening of Entertainment" on behalf of State of Israel Bonds, at the Synagogue on Sunday evening, November 15th. Featured guest entertainer will be the sensational Jan Bart, one of the most popular humorists and lyric tenors in America today.

Beth Sholom has consistently maintained an outstanding level of participation in the Israel Bond Campaign of Toronto, and has set a target this year of "Every Beth Sholom Member an Israel Bond Buyer". It is anticipated that the November 15th Dinner will give greatly added impetus towards achievement of the 100% Bond target as many of the young couples become "Israel Bond Families."

The committee in charge of arrangements for this event include Donald Latchman, President; Carl F. Winer, Israel Bond Chairman; and Mrs. P. Beale and Bernard Tishman, Programme Chairmen.

REPORT: SCIENTISTS RETURN

LONDON (JCNS) — Reports from Bonn last week claimed that a number of German scientists and technicians had returned from Egypt this summer and more were expected to follow soon.

Germans who have returned are now employed by Boelkow Developments at Ottobrunn, near Munich, according to a Daily Telegraph dispatch from Bonn.

Some 120 Germans at the Egyptian aircraft factory near Cairo, or 60 per cent of the German staff, have given notice, the newspaper "Frankfurter Rundschau" wrote yesterday.

HUMAN RELATIONS

Divorce and Guilt

DR. ROSE N. FRANZBLAU

QUESTION: Recently I obtained a divorce after 10 years of marriage. My wife retained custody of our 9-year-old son.

I have since remarried someone I met some years ago during a separation of eight months and with whom I went at various times until the divorce. We are very happy, being extremely compatible in nearly all ways.

However, I find myself being very anxious about the welfare of my ex-wife. I find myself hoping she will remarry and find a better life for herself. We were incompatible in every degree, which led to gambling on my part and staying away from home a great deal of my free time. In short, we were both miserable.

There were many, many arguments and long periods of absolute silence. Yet I know she is very bitter towards me for getting this divorce (though she did consent to it.) I try to compensate for this by often giving her amounts above the set support for the child. I find myself feeling very guilty, but I don't know exactly why.

ANSWER: Guilt engendered by some improper behavior in reality can be healthy and constructive. It can keep an individual from repeating the behavior which caused it originally.

There may have been things in reality, in your first marriage, of which you were ashamed deep down, however you may have rationalized them. No wife can remake a husband in the image of the man she would like to have, nor can she make him behave in ways that are foreign to him. Differences between a couple along these lines can lead to perpetual discord.

One or the other of the pair, in retaliation, may engage in some activity of which they are ashamed. But they use the supposed bad behavior of the mate and their unhappiness in the marriage as a justification for their misbehavior.

A nagging wife does not make a gambler gamble. The desire is always there, but now the individual has finally found a seeming justification. Since his wife is withholding her love, he will court "Lady Luck" or else seek to find love with another woman.

Sometimes a male, upon remarriage to a second woman becomes more mindful and considerate of his first wife than he ever was during their marriage. She becomes in a sense, an emotional mistress.

The guilt you feel may not be so much about your behavior to your former wife, but rather about your emotional disloyalty to your present one. In your concern and worry about your former wife, you act as if you were still to some degree, married to her.

You seem to feel that your former wife's bitterness is justified. Anything you can do to make life easier for her, like giving her extra money for the boy, may ease your guilt and temper her bitterness.

But evidently it does not relieve your guilt or really diminish her bitterness. It only makes it harder for her to accept the reality of the divorce and build a new life for herself. It puts the two women into a kind of covert competition with each other, supporting the illusion which the first wife may harbor, that you might one day come back to her. This certainly is neither realistic nor healthy for any of you.

Giving extras to your son should be motivated by your love and concern for him and not as a payment for past debts or unpaid emotional bills. Somehow, your son and how the divorce of his parents affects him are never mentioned. It is to him that your concern should be directed. Of course, a friendly consideration of his mother will also be a help to him. But for him to accept and adjust to the divorce, both of his parents must come to terms with the reality of it.
